She Had Heard of It.

Detroit Free Press. One of the loveliest things in young housekeepers to be found in these United States lives right here in Detroit. She has been a wife about three months, and got into her own new little housey a week ago. Day before yesterday she was going home, about half past 4 o'clock, and as she passed the last grocery up that way, a thought struck her and she went in. "Have you," she said to the smiling

"No, miss-ma'am," he replied in doubt. "Pshaw," she exclaimed, "are you sure!" "Quite so, ma'am; we sold the last this morning; but will have some more to-morrow, if you can wait.' "But I can't wait. Charlie is so fond of minced ham, and he told me to be sure to this evening. Have you any bacon pow-Then it was the clerk's Napoleonic tact came to his rescue, and, gracefully retiring to look for it among the hams, he sent out the proprietor, who broke the news to her gently, and Charlie got no minced ham or its possible substitute that evening.

Ingersoll's Religion.

Detroit Free Press. In a recent lecture in Detroit Robert G. Ingersoll is reported to have pictured the coming of a "new religion"-which should emancipate man and bring heaven to earth -as follows:

"I look and see that the priests and kings are gone. The aristocracy of the land and cloud have perished from the earth and sir. The gods are dead. A new religion sheds its glory on mankind; it is the gospel of this world; the religion of the body; the evangel of health and joy. I see a world at peace; where labor reaps its true reward; a world without prisons, without work-houses, without asylums; a world on which the gibbet's shadow does not fall; a world where a poor girl trying to win bread with her needle-the needle, that has been called the 'asp for the breast of the poor'-is not driven to the desperate choice of crime or death; of suicide or shame. A world without the beggar's outstretched hand; the miser's heartless, stony stare; the piteous wails of want; the pallid face of crime; the livid lips of lies; the cruel eyes of scorn. I see a race without disease of flesh or brain, shapely and fair; the married harmony of form and function; and as I look, life lengthens, Mrs. Arthur Kimbly, of Lyons, is the guest of Mrs. J. E. Bull....Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Hood left This is the shall be."
